

Only one-third of parents follow doctors' orders for kids all of the time

18 March 2013

Pediatricians regularly dispense advice to parents of young children during well-child visits, but a new University of Michigan poll shows that many aren't following doctors' orders.

Only one-third of parents (31 percent) said they follow advice from their child's health care provider all of the time, according to the most recent University of Michigan Mott Children's Hospital National Poll on Children's Health. Thirteen percent said they follow the provider's advice only occasionally.

Parents from lower-income households (

APA citation: Only one-third of parents follow doctors' orders for kids all of the time (2013, March 18) retrieved 17 September 2022 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2013-03-one-third-parents-doctors-kids.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.