Cauliflower Fried Rice

- 1 small head cauliflower, cut into florets
- 3 tablespoons sesame oil, divided
- 4 carrots, peeled and chopped
- 1 red or yellow onion, peeled and chopped
- 2 tablespoons ginger, minced
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 1 cup corn kernels
- 1/4 cup chopped cilantro
- 2 tablespoons reduced-sodium soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon hot sauce

Place the florets in a food processor and pulse about 15 times for a rough chop.

Warm a large skillet over medium heat and add one tablespoon of the oil. Add the cauliflower and cook four to five minutes, stirring well until the cauliflower starts to brown. Transfer to a large plate.

Heat the remaining oil in the same skillet. Add the carrots, onion, ginger and garlic. Cook three to four minutes, stirring often until the vegetables begin to brown. Push the vegetables to one side of the skillet and return the cauliflower, cooking 1 minute more while stirring gently.

Turn off the heat and stir in the corn, cilantro, soy sauce and hot sauce. Serve immediately or cool completely before storing in an airtight container in the fridge.

Yield: 4 servings

(HealthDay)—In the quest to lighten up on carbs and refined grains, cauliflower rice is the hands-down favorite substitute. But you don't have to buy pricy, pre-riced bags of cauliflower when a simple countertop appliance can do the job for you quickly and easily.

Cauliflower is one of the healthiest vegetables around, high in vitamins C and K, fiber and folate, but not everyone loves it on its own. The beauty of cauliflower is that other ingredients can transform its taste into familiar dishes. For instance, when mashed and seasoned with chives and/or sauteed garlic, cauliflower can step in for potatoes.

A ricer is the kitchen tool typically used to turn cooked cauliflower into fine, uniform shreds and works great to create a thick puree. But when you want to use cauliflower as a substitute for white rice and need to rice it raw, reach for the processor. Riced cauliflower can be used for many dishes that call for rice or pasta. This Asian fried "rice" is the perfect introduction to cauliflower cuisine.
